"The Rats in the Walls" by H. P. Lovecraft On July 16, 1923, I moved into Exham Priory after the last workman had finished his labours. The restoration had been a stupendous task, for little had remained of the deserted pile but a shell-like ruin; yet because it had been the seat of my ancestors I let no expense deter me.

A lot has already been said about “The Rats In The Walls”, not least in the Wikipedia entry. “The Rats In The Walls” is a great example of a story which has been woven out of an Urban Legend: The Piltdown Man. The Piltdown Man was a hoax in which bone fragments were presented as the fossilised remains of a previously unknown early human.

Shortly after moving in, de la Poer is wakened at night by what sounds like a massive horde of rats scratching and scurrying within the ancient walls, descending from the eaves down toward the cellar. This cacophony repeats nightly and has him understandably unnerved, especially since it seems only he and the cats can hear it.
